Summary

The Skeletal Care Academy (SCA) aims to create a network of excellence in bone health and this symposium will provide an insight into the SCA nurse programme and the educational opportunities available. The faculty will examine the main causes, diagnosis and management of cancer-related bone disease, covering those caused by cancer therapy and bone metastases. The nurses' role in the management of cancer-related bone disease and the interventions options available will be discussed and participants will be invited to share in the practical management of a case scenario.
